- A good thing
- A bad thing
- Neither good nor bad

How likely or not do you think it is that Turkey will join the European Union?

- Very likely
- Somewhat likely
- Not too likely
- Not likely at all

Some people say that the United States and Turkey have enough common values to be able to cooperate on international problems. Others say that the U.S. and Turkey have such different values that cooperating on international problems is impossible. Which is closer to your view?

- Enough common values to cooperate on international problems
- Such different values that cooperating on international problems is impossible

On international matters, with which one do you think Turkey would act in closest cooperation?

- The countries of the EU
- The U.S.
- The countries of the Middle East
- Turkey would act alone
- All of the above
- None of the above

On the issue of Turkey's membership to the European Union, to what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statements?

	AGREE STRONGLY	AGREE SOMEWHAT	DISAGREE SOMEWHAT	DISAGREE STRONGLY
Turkey's membership in the EU would help promote peace and stability in the Middle East.
Turkey's membership in the EU would be good in economic terms for Turkey.
As a predominantly Muslim country, Turkey does not belong in the EU.

How interested would you say you are in issues related to the Islamic Awakening topic?

- Very interested
- Somewhat interested
- Not too interested
- Not at all interested

When it comes to recent changes in political leadership in Middle Eastern countries such as Egypt and Libya, do you think the United States should be more involved than it is now, as involved as it currently is, or less involved than it is now?

- More involved than it is now
- As involved as it currently is
- Less involved than it is now

In terms of the political situation in the Middle East, which is more important?

- Democratic governments, even if there is less stability in the region
- Stable governments, even if there is less democracy in the region

Suppose there is a Muslim-majority country that is not democratic and if it were democratic, the people would probably elect an Islamic fundamentalist leader. Do you think the U.S. should encourage democracy, discourage democracy, or take no position on the issue either way in that country?

- Encourage democracy
- Discourage democracy
- Take no position either way

Following the political movements that started in 2010 known as the Arab Spring, new governments are being established in nations such as Libya, Egypt and Tunisia. In your view, will these changes be mostly good for the United States, mostly bad for the United States, or will they have no impact?

How interested would you say you are in issues related to the Energy Independence topic?

- Very interested
- Somewhat interested
- Not too interested
- Not at all interested

Thinking about long-range foreign policy goals, how much priority do you think the U.S. government should give to reducing U.S. dependence on imported energy sources?

- Top priority
- Some priority
- No priority at all

How much do you favor or oppose expanding offshore drilling for oil and natural gas off the U.S. coast?

- Strongly favor
- Somewhat favor
- Somewhat oppose
- Strongly oppose

How much of a threat to the vital interests of the United States in the next 10 years is U.S. dependence on foreign oil?

- Critical threat
- Important but not critical threat
- Not important or critical threat

There has been some discussion about the circumstances that might justify using U.S. troops in other parts of the world. Would you favor or oppose the use of U.S. troops to ensure the oil supply?

- Favor
- Oppose

Some people say that the world is facing some new problems that require new international institutions or agencies to deal with them. Do you think there should be new international institutions to monitor the worldwide energy market and predict potential shortages?

- Should be
- Should not be

How important is investing in renewable energy to the United States remaining competitive with other countries in the global economy?

- Very important
- Somewhat important
- Not too important
- Not important at all

- Discussed the article on Food and Climate with a Great Decisions discussion group
- Discussed the article on Food and Climate with friends or family
- Followed news related to the Food and Climate topic
- Taken a class in which you learned about issues related to the Food and Climate topic
- Have or had a job related to the Food and Climate topic

How interested would you say you are in issues related to the Food and Climate topic?

- Very interested
- Somewhat interested
- Not too interested
- Not at all interested

Thinking about U.S. foreign policy goals, how important of a goal is combating world hunger?

- Very important
- Somewhat important
- Not important at all
- Not too important

Do you feel the amount the U.S. government spends on efforts to reduce hunger in poor countries is too much, too little, or about right?

- Too much
- Too little
- About the right amount

Please select which of the following two statements comes closer to your point of view.

- The United States should only send aid to parts of the world where the U.S. has security interests.
- When hunger is a major problem in some part of the world, the United States should send aid whether or not the U.S. has a security interest in that region.

When it comes to addressing the problem of hunger, there is a debate about whether the U.S. should just provide food or if it also should help poor countries develop their economies. Please select which of the following two statements you agree with more:

- It is important to help poor countries develop their economies so that they can become more self-sufficient.
- Helping poor countries develop their economies is too complicated and it is impossible to tell if it is doing much good.

Current U.S. food aid policy requires some of the food aid sent abroad to be grown or raised in the United States and shipped to countries in need. A current proposal before the U.S. government would relax these requirements and allow the U.S. government to give more flexible food aid, including purchasing food from local farmers or giving poor people in other countries money to purchase food themselves locally. Do you think the U.S. should maintain its current food aid policy or relax the current requirements to make food aid more flexible?

- The U.S. government should maintain its current food aid policy.
- The U.S. government should relax the current requirements to make food aid more flexible.

If you had to choose which countries should get U.S. aid, which of these would you select as most important?

- Countries with the poorest economies
- Countries needed by the U.S. as trade partners
- Countries important to U.S. security

Is it your overall impression, that over the last few decades the number of people in the world who do not have enough to eat has increased, decreased, or stayed about the same?

- Increased
- Decreased
- Stayed the same

There is a controversy over what the countries of the world, including the U.S., should do about the problem of climate change. Here are three statements. Please select which statement comes closest to your own point of view:

- Until we are sure that climate change is really a problem we should not take any steps that would have economic costs.
- The problem of climate change should be addressed but its effects will be gradual so we can deal with the problem gradually by taking steps that are low in cost.
- Climate change is a serious and pressing problem and we should try taking steps now even if this involves significant costs.

To deal with the problem of climate change, do you think the U.S. government is doing too much, not enough, or about the right amount?

- Too much
- Not enough
- About the right amount

- Major threat
- Minor threat
- Not a threat

All things considered, which of these descriptions comes closest to your view of China today? Do you think China is...?

- An adversary of the United States
- A serious problem, but not an adversary
- Not much of a problem

In general, do you think Chinese trade policy toward the U.S. is fair or unfair?

- Fair
- Unfair

Now thinking about U.S. foreign policy in Asia, do you think the U.S. should put a higher priority on building strong relations with traditional allies like South Korea and Japan even if this might diminish its relations with China, or put a higher priority on building new partnerships with China, even if this might diminish U.S. relations with its traditional allies?

- Higher priority on building strong relations with traditional allies
- Higher priority on building new partnerships with China

If China's economy were to grow to be as large or larger than the US economy, do you think that would be mostly positive, mostly negative, or equally positive and negative?

- Mostly positive
- Mostly negative
- Equally positive and negative

In dealing with a rising China, do you think the US should:

- Undertake friendly cooperation and engagement with China
- Actively work to limit the growth of China's power

When it comes to economic development do you think the way that the Chinese government manages its economy and its political system is more of an advantage or more of a disadvantage for China?

- More of an advantage
- More of a disadvantage

For each of the following possible future trends, please tell us if you would see it as mainly positive or mainly negative.

	MAINLY POSITIVE	MAINLY NEGATIVE
China becomes significantly more powerful economically
China becomes significantly more powerful militarily

How concerned are you about the following issues in US-China relations:

	Very concerned	Somewhat concerned	Not too concerned	Not at all concerned
China's unwillingness to limit greenhouse emissions.
China's government limiting its people's access to the Internet.
China's keeping its currency cheap to make its exports more competitive.
China's repression of pro-democracy dissidents.
China's treatment of Tibet.
US weapons sales to Taiwan despite China's objections.

How worried are you, if at all, that China could become a military threat to the U.S. in the future? Please say whether you are very worried, somewhat worried, not too worried, or not worried at all?

- Very worried
- Somewhat worried
- Not too worried
- Not worried at all

Would you like to share any other thoughts with us about the China's Foreign Policy topic? If so, please use the space below.

- Taken a class in which you learned about international trade or U.S. trade policy
- Have or had a job in which goods or services were imported from other countries
- Have or had a job in which goods or services were exported to other countries

How interested would you say you are in issues related to U.S. trade policy?

- Very interested
- Somewhat interested
- Not too interested
- Not at all interested

People debate whether the U.S. government should increase restrictions on imports, keep restrictions on imports at current levels, or decrease restrictions on imports. What do you think the U.S. government should do?

- Increase restrictions on imports
- Keep restrictions on imports at current levels
- Decrease restrictions on imports

Do you think that reducing the U.S. trade deficit with foreign countries should be a very important foreign policy goal of the U.S. government, a somewhat important foreign policy goal, or not an important goal at all?

- Very important foreign policy goal
- Somewhat important foreign policy goal
- Not an important foreign policy goal

Do you think the Trans-Pacific Partnership, the free trade agreement the U.S. is negotiating with 11 countries in Asia and Latin America, would be a good thing or a bad thing for the United States?

- Good thing
- Bad thing

Do you think the Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership, the free trade agreement the U.S. is negotiating with the European Union, would be a good thing or a bad thing for the United States?

- Good thing
- Bad thing
